THOMAS NOBLE LINDSEY AND DESCENDANTS.

By Helen B. Lindsey, Newport, Ky.

Thomas Lindsey² and Rebeeca Harris, his wife, had five grandsons who bore the name, Thomas Lindsey. Two died in infancy; two bore the name Thomas J.; and the subject of this article, THOMAS NOBLE⁴.

Thomas Noble⁴ Lindsey was born at Newport, Kentucky, December 22, 1807; the oldest son and second child of John Brown³ Lindsey, of Ireland and his wife, Mariah Noble, of Virginia. He died at Frankfort, Kentucky, November 22, 1877.

He was educated in the private schools of Newport, Ky., and the old Cincinnati College, Cincinnati, O.

He was connected, in early youth, with the survey of the Wabash Canal; deputy sheriff of Campbell County 1827, under his father; and again in 1828, under his uncle, James Gardiner³ Lindsey.

He studied law with Richard Southgate, at Newport, and at the March 1830 term of Court was given a certificate of "probity and good demeanor"; licensed to practice Law in the Courts of Kentucky, August 1830. His license is signed by H. P. Brown, Circuit Judge of the Second Judicial district of Kentucky, and by William P. Roper.

Early in 1834 Thomas N. Lindsey located at Frankfort, Ky., where he was married, August 21, 1834, to Isabella Price Weisiger, (b December 28, 1809; d May 27, 1852), the daughter of Lucy Price and Captain Daniel Weisiger (b May 18, 1763, in Virginia,) being the third of his name, in this country, the first having emigrated from the Netherlands to Virginia, in 1745.

From 1834 to 1841, Thomas N. Lindsey was an active partner in the hotel business, left by Captain Weisiger at his death, and, after the sale of the "Weisiger House," he became a law partner with O. G. Cates. He was later elected Commonwealth Attorney for the Federal District; was a member of the Convention of 1850, that framed the Constitution of Kentucky; State Senator 1853-1855; member of the Legislature, from Franklin County, 1857-1859; a director in the Branch Bank of Kentucky, and, later, president of the Farmers Bank,

"He was Mayor pro tem, of Frankfort, Ky., during the occupancy by the Confederate troops, and, accompanied by other prominent citizens, under a flag of truce, met on the Versailles Pike, the Commander of the approaching army, and entered into terms of surrender and protection of the town and the people."

"Mr. Lindsey was a man of decided force of character. Identified from early manhood with the growth and prosperity of this city, he rapidly attained, by fearless energy and personal ability, positions of eminence in various stations of social and public life". . . He never sought the avenues of public preferment, but chose rather, the quieter, and more useful paths of the legal profession, in which he was prominently conspicuous for zeal and ability". . .

"Mr. Lindsey was ready with his pen and the columns of this paper, in its earlier days, contain many contributions, from his hand, to assist in pushing forward works of progress, or in correcting growth of public evils."

"In social life he was esteemed a rare companion; his rich and inexhaustible vein of humor, his aptness of illustration, and his ready application of homely truths making his presence a welcome adjunct to every circle."

"Added to these was a marked affection perpetually demonstrated in the loving attachments of a large family, which gave to the inner home life a beauty and strength beyond expression" (Frankfort, Ky., Newspaper).

Thomas Noble⁴ Lindsey contracted a second marriage, March 13, 1853, with Mrs. Louisa M. Applegate (b June 24, 1808; d February 24, 1873.) There was no family by this marriage.

Children of the first marriage were:

1. DANIEL WEISIGER⁵, (b October 3, 1835; d August 4, 1917.); married January 19, 1864, Katherine McIlvaine Fiteh, the daughter of Thomas Fiteh, of England; and Sara Dumesnil, of Louisville, Ky., whose ancestors came from France. Mrs. Lindsey died December 17, 1927 in her 88th year.

D. W. Lindsey secured the foundation of a splendid education in the private schools of Frankfort, Ky.; graduated in 1853 from the Kentucky Military Institute, which, in after years, conferred upon him the degree of Master of Arts.

He was engaged, for a time, in the coal-mining business; entered the Louisville, Ky., Law School in the winter of 1856-1857, and was graduated from that institution.

"In the spring of 1858 he began the practice of Law at Frankfort, Ky., and when the Civil War came on he resigned as Captain of the State Guards in May 1861, and, when General William Nelson opened a recruiting station for the Federal troops, D. W. Lindsey became a drill master for the recruits. When General Thomas L. Crittenden became Inspector General, Lindsey became Adjutant General on the staff, and when Crittenden became General in the U. S. Army, General Lindsey was commissioned to raise a regiment. This he accomplished with energy and expedition, and the regiment became the Twenty-second Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and as such, was mustered into the United States Army service, with D. W. Lindsey as Colonel."

"He served with General Garfield's expedition up the Big Sandy River; participated in the taking of Cumberland Gap; was in the expedition up the Kenneway Valley; and later ordered to Memphis, Tennessee.

After the Vicksburg campaign, he was, with his command, ordered to New Orleans, La., in the Department of the Gulf; and remained in that department until the latter part of 1863, when he tendered his resignation to become Inspector General, and later, Adjutant General, of Kentucky, which position he held until the fall of 1867. During that time he accomplished an important work—the "Compilation of the Adju-

the first time, and I have been told that it is a very good one. It is a large, well-constructed house, with a spacious hall, a large dining room, and several bedrooms. The kitchen is well equipped, and there is a large garden in the rear. The house is located in a quiet, residential area, and is surrounded by trees and shrubs. The exterior of the house is painted a light color, and the roof is made of shingles. The interior of the house is spacious and well-lit, with high ceilings and large windows.
The furniture in the house is simple and functional, and the overall atmosphere is one of comfort and relaxation. I am very pleased with my new home, and I am looking forward to many happy years ahead.

tant General's Report," 1861-1866, of Kentucky, a two volume publication which contained the military history of every officer and soldier in the Civil War."

January 1868, Daniel Weisiger⁵ Lindsey resumed the practice of Law in partnership with his father, Thomas Noble⁴ Lindsey, and after the latter's death was associated with his brother, John Brown⁵ Lindsey.

In 1868, he was a director of the Branch Bank of Kentucky, which became the National Branch Bank of Kentucky, of which, he became president in 1880. Politically, he was a Republican, with his family, he was a member of the Episcopal Church, and served as vestryman for many years; a Mason, and eligible to wear the gallant white plume of the Knight Templar; a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows; Order of Elks; and held membership in the Grand Army of the Republic. He was president of the Frankfort Water Company.

Children; (i) Antoinette Dumesil⁶, (b October 26, 1864; d October 30, 1881).

(ii) Thomas Noble⁶. studied Law at University of Virginia; a lawyer and Referee in Bankruptcy, at Frankfort, Ky.

(iii) Henry Fitch⁶, president of the National Branch Bank, of Frankfort, Kentucky.

(iv) Daniel Weisiger⁶, lawyer; attended Princeton University; a member of the Smith and Lindsey Insurance Company; president of the Frankfort Water Company. He married, at Richmond, Va., October 28, 1903, Annie Munford Merrill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Franklin Merrill. One son, Daniel Weisiger⁷ Lindsey the third.

(v) Katherine Fitch⁶, married October 1, 1903, Wade Hampton Negus, of Greenville, Miss., where they reside. two children; Katherine Lindsey⁷, and Louise⁷.

II. JOHN BROWN⁵, (b July 4, 1837; d April 8, 1922); married January 18, 1860, Helen Talbot (b June 12, 1841; d February 21, 1908), daughter of William Garrard Talbot and wife, Cordelia Wood. William Talbot was a son of Isham Talbot (U. S. Senator from Kentucky, 1815 -19, and 1820- 1825); and grandson of James Garrard, Governor of Kentucky.

On the maternal side Mrs. Lindsey's lineage traced back to Donald McDonald, of Fredericksburg, Va., a native of Ireland, and his wife, Helen Barrett.

John Brown⁵ Lindsey began his education in the private schools of Frankfort, Ky., but when not more than eight or nine years of age, entered as a cadet in the Kentucky Military Institute. This school being closed for a time by an epidemic of typhoid fever, J. B. Lindsey, after his recovery from the fever, entered the Classical School of B. B. Sayre, of Frankfort, until the summer of 1851, when he returned to the Institute, graduating in June 1854, as Civil Engineer, and B. of A., and, in June 1856, received his degree of M. A.

From June 1854 to December 1856, he clerked in a book-store, and studied Law with his father, T. N. Lindsey. He was sufficiently well versed to practice Law at nineteen, but had to wait until he was twenty-one to get a license.

the same time, the author has been compelled to make a number of changes in the original manuscript, and these changes have been introduced into the present edition. In some cases, the changes are merely slight variations in the spelling or punctuation of words; in others, they consist of entire paragraphs or sections which have been added or omitted. The author has also made a few minor corrections in the original manuscript, and these have been included in the present edition.

In December 1856, he accompanied his grandmother, Mrs. Lucy Price Weisiger, to Mission Valley, Texas, where he engaged in farming and stock-raising. In 1857 he raised a crop of 75 acres of corn and 5 acres of millet, which he sold at a profit.

From May 1, 1857 to the fall of 1859, he traveled in Mexico and western Texas, bought mules and drove them from there along up the frontier to Missouri, Illinois, and Kentucky.

Mrs. Weisiger died in Texas, 1857, and the principal tie being broken J. B. Lindsey, in the fall of 1859, returned to Kentucky, and with his father, bought a farm of 300 acres in Woodford County, Ky., upon which he built the home to which he took his bride in 1860. The writer has often heard him tell how he carried one end of every beam that was used in the building of that home, and all the lime used was made from the stone quarried on the place. Before the close of the Civil War he freed his slaves and moved to Frankfort, where he practiced law until his death in 1922.

He was a member of the firm of D. W. & J. B. Lindsey, and was especially well known for his work on land titles. He was an agent of the Home Insurance Company of New York for fifty years.

In 1865, J. B. Lindsey became a member of the Episcopal Church at Frankfort, and spent many years in active service in the Sunday School as superintendent, and as a vestryman of the church.

the same time, the author of the original work, or his heirs, may have the right to receive payment for the use of their work. This right is called "copyright".
Copyright is a form of intellectual property protection. It gives the owner the right to control the copying, distribution,
and public performance of their work.
Copyright law varies by country, but it generally protects original works such as books, music, movies, and software. Copyright does not protect ideas or facts, only the expression of those ideas or facts. It also does not protect common knowledge or facts
that are already in the public domain.
Copyright is typically granted for a limited period of time, such as 28 years from the date of publication. After this period, the work enters the public domain and can be used freely by anyone. However, it is important to note that copyright law is complex and can be subject to interpretation by courts. It is always best to consult with a lawyer if you have questions about your rights as a copyright holder or if you are considering using someone else's copyrighted
work.
